

Dr. Matt Litterell is the Executive Director of Workforce and Economic Development at Tulsa Tech, where he leads strategic initiatives to align education and training with the evolving needs of industry. He brings a wealth of experience from his previous role at the Oklahoma Department of Career and Technology Education, where he oversaw statewide programs in workforce training, adult literacy, and career and technical education housed in Oklahoma Correctional Facilities.

Before entering the public sector, Dr. Litterell spent two decades in the telecommunications industry, holding executive roles across operations, engineering, sales, and marketing. His leadership consistently drove performance, innovation, and cross-functional collaboration.

Throughout his tenure with the Oklahoma Career Tech system, Dr. Litterell has earned recognition for his contributions to economic development, particularly for designing innovative training incentive programs that help attract, develop, and retain a highly skilled workforce — key to securing major projects for the state.

Dr. Litterell holds a B.S. in Business Administration and a Doctorate in Education Leadership from Southwestern College, as well as an M.B.A. from Oklahoma Christian University.

Outside of his professional life, Matt is a devoted husband and father. He and his wife — an accomplished educator who teaches Chemistry and Forensics — have seven children ranging from 7 to 25, and two grandsons. Their shared passion for education and service continues to shape their family and community.